The Conference of Lausanne continues to struggle with the problems of the Near East. A Russian representative has appeared in the person of Tchltcheria and his influence seems to strengthen Turkey's demands. At present the question of the Bosphorus and the Dardanelles ls foremost. The Allies and Ihe U. S. wish them fully free and open to warships as well as to merchant vessels. Russia supports Turkey ln her desire for exclusive control and wishes the stralts closed to warships. This is just the reverse of Russia's policy in the past and at one time she broke a treaty in order to gain what she now opposes. A second demand of the Allles is the right of special consular courts in Turkey to try cases in which their subjects are involved. Turkey stands firm thus far against such concession. As both sides are holding out, but little progress toward a settlement is being made as vet.

> The new constitution of the Irish Free State, after acceptance in Ireland, is now being considered in the English Parliament. Considerable anxiety has been caused by the execution of Erskine Childers, a supporter of De Valera and the Republic. Childers is an Englishman by birth and formerly opposed the radical movement. He was a theorist, however, and turned to the other side. He was a man of fine character and attainments and will be regarded as a martyr to the cause of Irish liberty. The charge against him was carrying a pistol contrary to the law. It is believed, however, that his death was sought as a retaliation for the death of Griffith and Collins. This execution threatens to start ancw the reign of force, unless the Free State is in control of the situation.

THE revolutionery government of Greece hae tried, convicted end executed three former premiers, two former cabinet officers and a ganeral for coneplring to commit high treason, in connection with the Greek debncle in Asia Minor. MORE trouble looms for Greece. Last week the militery conrtmertial in Athena found guilty a number of those accused of conspiracy to commit high treason in connection with the defect of the Greek armies hy the Turke, end six of them were condemned to death. These were former Premiere Gounaria, Stratoe and Protopapadekia; former Cabinet Members Baltazzi and Theotokis and General Hadjanestis, who commanded the Asia Minor ermies, General Stratigos end Admiral Goudan were condemned to life imprisonment. Great Britein. through Minister F. O. Lindley, wes quick to protest egainst the carrying out of the death sentences, but the Greeks ignored this and within a few bours the six were lined up and shot.

Minister Lindley at once notified the Greek government that Great Britain had broken off relations with it and he departed for Lausanne to confer with Lord Curzon, the Brittsh foreign minister. Just why the British felt It their duty to pursue this conrse was not revesled in the dispatches, but a good guess is that they were glad to find this opportunity to sever a reintionship that had become exceedingly irksome and that had brought on them little but abuse and ridicule. Now they are nhle to quit Greece with a gesture, of righteousness. But the results for Greece are likely to he very serious, for Great Britain has been her financial mainstay and if she cannot form other close friendships she may find herself prectically leolsted. At this writing no other nation has followed the lead of Britain, but it was said in Washington that the incident might cause the indefinite postponement of recognition of the Greek government by the United States. Before the execution Jefferson Caffery, the American charge d'effaires in Athens, on his personni account, advised against it.

King George did not approve of the executions and asked permission to leeve the country. Instend, he was held under strict surveillance in the royal paince just outside of Athens.

EXACTLY what is going on in the Lausanne conference is being carefully concealed, the official communiques being brief statements from which the important facts ere all omitted. The correspondents, reduced to conjecture, send out many stories of dissension, and there is good reason to believe some of these are based on truth. It is certain that the two committees handling the quentions of the frontiers of Turkey and the possenston of the Mostil oil fields are making ilttle progress. The Turks, refusing to recognize the Mudros armistice of 1918, decline to accept responsibility for the cost of maintaining ailled troops in Constantinople, which some weeks ego reached e total of helf a billion dollars. They slao insist they are the owners of the Mosul oil fields. which ere in the Mesopotamisn territory mandeted to firitain. This oil question is perhaps the most troublesome one the conference has to deal with. It is reported the English may finally consent to throw over Felsal and his kingdom of fraq end let Turkey have the territory, provided they are assured of concessions for the development of the oil fields. Several other European nations claim a ahare, however, and Americans have large interesta in the region, which Messra. Child and Grew are trying to safeguard by insisting on the open door. The Angora government seems rather partial to the Americans in this matter. It elso is desirous that the Amer-Ican achools and colleges shall continue in operation in Turkey. Eastern Thrace and Adrianople heve been turned over to the Turks and they are with difficulty being held back from crossing the Maritza river and seizing Karagatch, which they claim because it is the terminus of the raliroad from Constantinople, The Greeks have two ermy corps posted along the western hank of the river.

THERE were important developments in Paris last week concerning the possible occupation of the Ithineland by the French when the expected default in reparations paymental by the Germans comes in January. Cailes from Paris almost flatly asserted that the government had completed ite arrangements for such action, including plans for both military and civil ndministration of the territory to be selzed, and it was assumed that there would be no othertion by Grent Brit.

plating a forcible entry into the Huhr Chancellor Cuno had notified the alties that his government fully indorsed the "final" demand of Doctor Wirth for a moratorium of three or four years on all reparations payments and a huge international losa. Berlin was greatly disturbed by the reports from f'aris, but could only relterate that fulfillment of the trenty of Versailtes would ruin both Germany and France. Questioned in the house of commons, Prime Minister Bonse Law said he had no information that would justify him in saying the French occupation of the Ruhr was imminent; but just before that he had a long conference with the French amhassador, and this was aignificant because heretofore he has insisted on leaving foreign affairs to the foreign office,

In fills American addresses, especially the one delivered in Unicago last week, M. Clemenceau Insists that, nithough France does not desire to crush Germany, she has the best of reason to fest snother attack on her by the Germans when, through alliance with soviet Russia and Turkey, they think themselves powerful enough to seek revenge. He called attention to 45 grave violations by Germany of the disnrmament provisions of the trenty discovered by the allied authorities, mainly in the form of large hidden etorea of war material. Clemencean charged that Germany, in her efforts to evade her responsibilities, had bankrupted herself intentionally to keep from paying France; that the average tax in Germany is only $14 in contrast to an average of $45 in France. He denled sgain and again and at length that France is militaristic.

SYNOPSIS

PART I.—Newcomer in a small town, a young newspaper man, who tells ha slory, is amased by the unascountable actions of a man who, from the wift-low of a line house, apparently has converse with invisible personages, particularly mentioning one "Himptedoria." The youth goes to his bearding house, the home of hirs Apperthwaite, gast door to the scene of the strange proceedings, bewildered.

PART II.—Nest morning he discovera his alrange neighbor is the Hon. David Reasley, prominent politician, and universally respected. Teiling of his less night's esperience, he is markedly interrupted hy a fellow boarder, a hir. Georga Donden. Later, with Miss Apperthwalte, lie is an unseen winess of a purely imagiosry jumping contest between theasley and a "Hill Heinmerstey." Miss Apperthwalte appears deepty concerned, there apparently being no possible applanation of the strange proceedings.

PART III.—The reporter learns that Beasley and Miss Apperliwaits had at one time been engaged, and that the young tady had broken the engagement because of Beasley's "lack of frosgina-

PART IV.—The "inyslery" of "Simple-doria" and "Bill Hammerstey" is explained by Mr. Dowieo. Heastey is caring for a small boy, Hamilton Swift. Juntor, a helpless invalid bodily though more than ordinarily tright mentally, the son of dear friends who are dead, and "Simpledoria" and "Bill Hammerstey" are creatures of Heastey's and he sinall boy's imagination, tlessley homoring the little sufferer by the "blay acting."

Miss Apperthwnite was at home the the library with "Les Miseraldes" or. her knee when I muge down from the room a little before hugh thue; and she looked up and gave me a smile that made me feel sorry for any one she had ceased to smile upon.

"I wanted to tell you," I said, with a little awkwardness but plenty of truth, "I've found out that I'm nn aufal fool.

"But that's something," she returned encournglagly-"at least the beginning of wisdom."

"I mean about Mr. Beasley-the mystery I was absurd enough to that in 'Simpledoria.' I want to tell you-"

"Oh, I know," she said; and although she laughed with an effect of carelessness, that look which I luid thought "far awny" returned to Ler eyes as she spoke. There was a certain inscrutability about Miss Apper thwalte sometimes, it should be added, as if she did not like to be too easily read. "I've heard all about it. Mr. Bensley's been appointed trustee or something for poor Handlton Swift's son, a jdtiful little invalld boy who invents all sorts of characters. The old darky from over there told our cook about Bill Hammersley and Simpledorla. So, you see, I naderstand."

"I'm glad you do," I sald.

A little hardness-one might even have thought it bitterness-became apparent in her expression. "And Fig. gold there's somebody in that house, at last, with a little langingtion!"

"From everything I have heard," I returned, summoning sufficient bo dness, "It would be difficult to say which has more-Mr. Bensley or the child."

Her slance fell from mile at this. but not quickly enough to conceal a sudden, half-startled look of trouble (I can think of no other way to express It) that leaped into It; and she rose, for the lunclebell was ringing. "I'm just finishing the death of Jean Valjean, you know, in 'Les Miserpbles," she said, as we moved to the "I'm always afraid I'll cry over that. I try not to, because it makes my eyes red."

And, in truth, there was a vague rumor of teurs about her eyes-not as If she had shed them, but more as If she were going to-though I had not noticed it when I came in,

That afternoon, wher, I reached the Despatch office, I was commissioned to obtain certain podtlcal information from the Honorable David Bensley, an assignment I ac cepted with engerness, notwithstanding the commiseration it brought me from one or two of my fellows in the reporter's room. "You won't get anything out of him!" they said. And they were true prophets.

I found him looking over some documents in his office; a reflective, unlighted cignr in the corner of his mouth; his chair tilted back and his feet on a window-sill. He nodded. woon my statement of the affair that brought me, and without shifting his position, gave me a look of slow but wholly friendly scrutiny over his shoulder, and hade me sit down. I began at once to put the questions I was told to ask him-interrogations (he seemed to helieve) satisfactorily answered by slowly and runtuatively stroking the left side of his chin with two long fingers of his right hand, the while ne smiled in genial contemplation of a tarred roof beyond the win-

daw. Now and then he would give me a mild and drawling word or two, not hrilliantly librolantive, it may be remarked. "Well-about that—" he began once, and then came hamediately to a full stop. "Yes?" I said, hopefully, my pencti poised. "About that- I guess-

"Yes, Mr. Bensley?" I encouraged him, for he seemed to have dried up permanently.

"Well, sir-I guess- Iluda't you hetter see some one else about tlat?" This with the nir of a man who would be but too fluent and copious upor any subject to the world except the one particular point,

I never met anybody else who looked so pleasantly communicative and managed to say so little. In fact, he didn't say soything at all; and I guessed that this fuculty was not without its value in his political career, disastrons as it had proved to his private happiness. His habit of silence, moreover, was not cultivated; you could see that "the secret of it" was that he was born quiet.

My note-book remained noteless and finally, at some odd evasion of his, accomplished by a monosyllable, I hughed outright-and be did, too! following Saturday. I found her in He joined eachimations with me heartily, and with a twinkling quizzlculgess that somelow gave me the iden that he might be thinking (rather upologetically) to blioself: "Yes, sir, that old Beasley man is certainly a mighty framy critter!"

When I went away, a few moments later, and left him still intermittently clinckling, the hopresston remained with one that he had some such depreentory and surreptitions thought.

Two or three days after that, as I started down-town from Mrs. Apperthwulte's, Beasley came out of his gate, bound in the same direction. He gave me it look of gay recognition and offered lds hand, saying, "Well! Up in this neighborhood!" as if that were a matter of considerable astonishment.

I mentloaed that I was a neighbor, and we walked on together. I don't think be spoke again, except for a "Well, sir!" or two of gental surprise at something I said, and, now and there "You don't tell me!" which he had a most eloquent way of exclaiming; but he listened visibly to my own talk, and laughed at everything that I meant for funny.

I never knew anybody who gave one a greater responsiveness; he seemed to be with you every instant; and how he tande you feel it was the true mystery of Bensley, this slient man who never talked, except (as my consin sald) to oblidren.

It happened that I thus met him, as we were loth starting down town, and walked on with bio, several days in succession: in a word, it became a lubit. Then, one afternoon, as 1 turned to leave blm at the Despatch office, he asked me if I would drop in at his bonse the next day for a clgar before I started. I dld; and he asked me If I would come uguln the day after that. So this became a habit

A fortnight elapsed before I met Hamilton Swift, Junior; for he, poor little falber of drennt-children, could be no spectator of track events upon the lawn, but by la his bed upstairs However, he grew better at last, and my presentation took place.

We had just thished our cigars in Bensley's alry, old-fashloned "sitting room," and were rising to go, when there cause the faint creaking of small wheels from the hall. Beasley turned to me with the apologetic and monosyllnide chuckle that was distinctly his alone,

"I've got a little chap bere-" he said; then went to the door, "Bobf" The old darky appeared in the doorway pushing a little wagon like a reclining-chair on wheels, and in it sat

Hamilton Swift, Junior. My tirst impression of him was that he was all eyes: I couldn't look at anything else for a time, and was hardly conscious of the rest of that weaxened, peaked little face and the undersized wisp of a body with its pathetic adjuncts of metal and leather. I think they were the brightest eyes I ever saw-as keen and intelligent as a wicked old woman's, withsi as trustful and cheery as the eyes of a setter

"Hoo-ray !"

Thus the Honorable Mr. Beasley. waving a handkerchief thrice around his head and thrice cheering.

And the child, in that cricket's voice of his, replied:

"Br-r-ra-vol"

This was the form of salutation familiarly in use between them. Beas ley followed it by inquiring, "Who's with us today?

"I'm Mister Swift," chirped the little fellow. "Mis-ter Swift, if you please, Consin David Bessiey,"

Beasley executed a formal bow "There is a gentleman here who'd like to meet you." And he presented me with some grave phrases commendatory of my general character, addressing the child as "Mister Swift"; whereupon Mister Swift gave me a ghostly litle hand and professed himself glad to meet me,
"And besides me," he sided, to

Beasley, "there's Bill Hammersley and Mr. Corley Linbridge."

A faint perplexity manifested itself upon Beasley's face at this, a shadow which cleared at once when I asked if I might not be permitted to meet these personages, remarking that I had heard from Dowden of Bill Hammersley, though until now a stranger to the fame of Mr. Corley Linbridge, Bessley performed the ceremony with intentional elegance, while the boy's grent eyes swept glowingly from his cousin's face to mine and back agin. I bowed and shook hands with the air, once to my left and once to my right.

"And Simpledoris!" cried Mister Swift. "You'll enjoy Simpledoria." "Ahove all things," I said. "Can be shake hands? Some dogs can."

"Watch hin. !" buster Swift lifted a commanding finger, "Simpledoria, shake hands!"

I knelt beside the wagon and shook an imaginary hig paw. At this Mister Swift again shook hands with me and allowed me to perceive, in his luminons regard. a solemn commendation and approval.

In this wise was my initiation into the beautiful old house and the cordiality of its inmates completed; and I became a familiar of David Beasley and his ward, with the privilege to go and come as I pleased; there was always gay and friendly welcome. I always came for the clear after lunch, sometimes for lunch itself; sometimes I dined there instead of down town; and now and then when it happened that an errand or assignment took me that way in the afternoon, I would run in and "visit" awhile with Hamilton Swift, Junior, and bis circle of friends.

There were days, of course, when his attacks were upon him, and only Bessley and the doctor and old Bob saw him; I do not know what the boy's mental condition was at such times; hut when he was better, and could he wheeled about the house and again receive callers, he displayed an almost dismaying activity of mind-it was active enough, certainly, to keep far ahead of my own. And he was masterful: still, Beasley and Dowden and I were never directly children for insubordination, though made to wince painfully by the look of troubled surprise that met us when we were not quick enough to catch his meaning. The order of the day with him always begun with the "Hoo-ray" and "Br-r-ru-vo" of greeting: after which we were to inquire, "Who's with us to-Whereupon he would make known the character in which he elected to be received for the occasion. If he aunounced himself as "Mister Swift," everything was to he very grown-np and decorous indeed. Formalities and distances were observed: and Mr. Corley Linbridge (an elderly personage of great dignity and distinction as a mountain-climber) was much oftener included in the conversation than Bill Hammersley. If, however, he declared himself to he "Hamilton Swift, Junior," which was his happiest mood, Bill Hammersley and Simpledorla were in the ascendant, and there were games and contests. (Dowden, Beasley and I all slid down the banlsters on one of the Hamilton Swift, Junior, days, at which really picturesque spectacle the boy almost cried with laughter-and old Bob and his wife, who came running from the kitchen, did cry.) He had a third appellation for himself-"Just little Homllton;" but this was only when the crenky voice could hardly chirp at all and the weazened face was drawn to were very quiet. Once, for ten days, his invisibles all went away on a visit: Hamilton Swift, Junior, had become interested in hears. While this lasted, all of Bensley's trousers were, as Dowden said, "a sight." For that matter, Dowden himself was quite hourse in court from growling so much. The hears were dismissed abruptly; Bill Hammersley and Mr. Corley Linbridge and Simpledoria came trooping back, and with them they brought that wonderful family, the Hunchhergs.

Bensley had just opened the from door, returning at noon from his office, when Hamilton Swift, Junior's, voice came piping from the library. where he was reclining in his wagon by the window.

"Consin David Bensley! Cousin Davld, come a-running!" he cried. "Come a tunning! The Hunchbergs are here! Of course Cousin David Beasley came a-running, and was immediately introduced to the whole Hunchberg family, a ceremony which old Boh, who was with the boy, had previously undergone with courtly grace.

"They like Bob," explained Hamilton, "Don't you, Mr. Hunchberg? Yes, he mays they do extremely!" (He used such words as "extremely" often; indeet, as Howden said, he talked "like a calld in a book," which was due, I dure sny, to his English mother.) "And I'm sure," the boy went on, "that all the family will admire Coustn David. Yes, Mr. Hunchberg says, he thinks they will."

And then (as Bob told me) he went elmost out of his hend with joy whee Bensley offered Mr. Hunchberg a clgst and struck a match for him to light it.

"But whar," exclaimed the old darky, "whar in de name o' de good Gawd do de chile get dem names? Illt lak to skeer me!"

That was a subject often debated hetween Dowden and me; there was nothing in Wolnwright that could have suggested there, and it did not seem probable he could have remembered them from over the water. In my opinlon they were the inventions of that busy and lonely little brain.

I met the Hunchberg family, myself, remember all their names, and helped in the introduction. There was Mr. Hunchberg-evidently the child's favorite, for he was described as the ossessor of every engaging virtueand there was that lively matron, Mrs. Hunchberg; there were the Hunchberg young gentlemen, Tom, Noble aud Grandee; and the young ladies, Miss Queen, Miss Marble and Miss Molanya -all exceedingly gay and pretty. There was also Colonel Hunchberg, an uncle; finally there was Aunt Cooley Hunchberg, a somewhat decrept hut very amiable old lady. Mr. Corley Linbridge happened to be calling al the same time; and, as it appeared to he Beasley's duy to keep the conversation going and constantly to include all of the party in its general flow, it struck me that he had truly (as Dowden said) "enough to keep him busy." The Hunchbergs had lately moved to Wainwright from Constantinople, I learned; they had decided not to live In town, however, having purchased a fine farm out in the country, and, on account of the disfance, were able to times a day, and seldom more than twice in the evening. Whenever a mystic telephone announced that they were on the way, the child would have himself wheeled to a window; and when they came in sight he would cry out in wild delight, while Beasley hastened to open the front door and admlt them. They were so real to the child, and Bessley Irealed them with such consistent seriousness, that between the two of them I sometimes began to feel that there actually were such people, and to have moments of half-surprise that I couldn't see them; particularly an each of the Hunchhergs developed a character entirely his own to the last peculiarity, such as the aged Aunt Cooley Hunchherg's deafness, on which account Beasley never forgot to raise his voice when he addressed her. Indeed, the details of sctuality in all this appeared to hring as great a delight to the man as to the child. Certainly he built them up with infinite care. On one occasion when Mr. Hunchberg and I happened to be calling, Hamilton remarked with surprise that Simple Ioria had come into the room without licking his hand as he usually did, and had crept under the table. Mr. Hunchherg volunteered the information (through Beasley) that upon his approach to the house he had seen Simpledoria chasing a cat. It was then dehated whether chastisement was in order, but finally decided that Simpledoria's surreptitious manner of entrance and his hiding under the table were sufficient indication that he well understood his baseness. and would never let it happen again And so, Bensley having conxed him out from under the table, the offender "sal up," begged, and was forgiven. I could almost feel the splendid shaggy head under my hand when, in turn, I patted Shapledoria to show that the reconciliation was manimons.

It is known that hecause of the bellef in high conaervative places that the campaign was one to some extent of misunderatanding, they are going to try, if they can, to conduct an educational campalgn which they hope will result in changing the views of some of the voters to coincide with the viewpoint of conservative Republicanism.

It is certain from the signs of the times that both conservative Republicans, and such of their liberal brethren as are giving no thought to a third party, believe that if the party is to he assured of success in 1924 there must be a getting together of the fac-

The result will be, probably, the day after their arrival, and Bers- that the representatives of the two ley, by that time, had become so well schools of medicine will confer toacquainted with them that he could gether and reach some kind of an agreement which both of them may think is necessary to keep the school of Republicanism in continued sesslon.

Pracadence Rulas in Washington.

Congress is here again, struggling with legislative projects, some of widch the members like and some of which they do not like a little bit. There are some things just now in Washington, however, to kold part of the attention. Once in a while it is, or may be, a good thing to get away from politics and legislation. It is a bit restful.

Washington is a social place. It has to be. The entente cordiale, as we think the diplonoits call it, could not be maintained at high pitch and yet in full tune if official activities were allowed to lag. Congress dances, diplomacy dances, the judiciary dances, and the rest of the Washington community

It is true that this fall new members of congress are not much in evidence, for they will not appear until the beginning of an extra session next spring. if there be one, or until the beginning of the regular aesalon next December. Nevertheless some few of them are here house-hunting. When they do come, the good women of their households will find that they have certain duties to perform after a manner new call at Bensley's only about eight When Mrs. Representative arrives here it is her first social duty to call on Mrs. Senstor. If she does not do it she never will meet Mrs. Senator except by accident. Mrs. Senator will return the call after it is made.

It is the duty of the incoming Mrs. Senutor to call on Mrs. Associate Justice of the Supreme court. If she does not do it she never will see Mrs. Associate Justice of the Supreme court except by accident. In other words, the lowly must call first on the mighty, and this condition of things must prevail until, through the whirligig of polltics or presidential appointment, the lowly become the mighty, and then the thing is reversed and the former Mrs. Mighty has to call thrat on the former Mrs. Lowly.

There is a lot of humor in this thing, but the procedure is as fixed, if one can use a brouide, as were the laws of the Medes and Persians. This precedence thing has bothered certain of the authorities in Washington since the beginning of the republic, and the heart-burnings of some of the women, and some of the men also, have been a lasting affliction.

Gldeon Welles, secretary of the navy in the Lincoln administration, kept a dlary. Years after his death it was published, and it makes mighty inter-"I'recedence" was a esting reading. thorn in Lincoln's day and Welles tells a somewhat delightful story.

He says that Schuyler Colfax, then speaker of the house of representatives, came to him one day and said that Mrs. Welles ought to call on Mrs. Colfux, who was not the wife of the speaker, but his mother. Welles intimated that he thought it ought to be the other way. William II, Seward. who then was secretary of state, was supposedly a diplomat of rare ability. It seems that Colfax went to the secretary of state with this high matter of precedence, and then he went to Welles and said, "Seward declars Mrs. Welles ought to call on Mrs. Colfax first." Then Welles says, in effect, in his dlary, "Seward never dld know much, anyway." Perhaps it might be said here that Welles was no great admirer of Lincoln's secretary of state.

One Unsettisd Question. It never has been quite settled which takes precedence in society, the cablnet of the President or the Supreme court of the United States. Generally, however, it is admitted that the cahinet ranks the court. Sometimes, however, the wife of a Supreme court justice holds out on the question of her supposed privileges and wants the wife of the cabinet officer to call first, There seems to have been a way of fixing up these things, however, and nothing untoward ever has happened.

The women of the cabinet have recelving days and all who want to come may. It is one of the first duties of the wife of a newly-elected senator or representative to leave a card at the White House and then cards at the resldences of the wives of the cabinet members, if they happen to have wives. This establishes things, and while cablaet women do not do much calling, because, if they started out to do it, they would have to do too much of It, they accept invitations to general affairs given by the wives of senators and representatives.

(From Courler-Journal)

The Senate Committee on Agriculture yesterday reported unanimously a resolution for submitting a Constitutional amendment for the abolitlon of the Electoral College and the election of President and Vice President by direct popular vote. The amendment would also make the term of a l'resident begin on the third Monday in January instead of the 4th of March, and would fix the beginning of the first regular session of Congress on the first Monday in January instead of thirteen months after its election, as at present.

The criticism against this resolution is that it should be two resolutions instead of one. It would provide for two very different reforms. Changing the beginning of the terms of the President and of Congress and changing the method of electing the President are proposals that should not be complicated with each other. Each should stand on its own legs, neither leaning on the other.

If they be separated, as they should be, it is unlikely that there will be much objection to an amendment changing the dates for the beginning of Presidential and Congressional terms. This change is generally favored and would have been made long ago if the necessary action had been taken to effect it. There is no probability that a resolution for the amendment would meet any serious obstruction in getting thru Congress or that the amendment would not be readily ratified by the States.

By all means let the advocates of the change see to it that the separation of the two proposals be made.

The Associated l'ress pronounces this favorable report by the Senate Committee the first legislative victory of the new I'ro. gressive bloc in Congress. The Associated Press is not often so wide of the mark. The proposed reform is not a party or bloc measure. It is advocated by the new Progressive bloc, as it is advocated by nearly everybody else, in or out of blocs. The unanimity of the Senate Agricultural Committee in reporting the resolution favorably was a reflection of non-partisan, bi-partisan and all-partisan sentiment. That committee, composed of Republicans and Democrats, is not a bloc committee, the some of its members do approve some of the objects of the "Progressive bloc."

The fact that this boc may take the lead in pushing the resolution thru Congress should not weaken it among other blocs or among non-bloc Democrats and Republicans, any more than the fact that other blocs, or Democrats or Republicans, might take the lead should weaken it with the Progressive bloc. The strength of the movement is in the practically universal recognition of its merits, which is another forcible reason why it should stand on its merits, uncomplicated with any other movement.

DOWN ON THE CONGAREE

There's a happy place I love so well Far down under sunny southern skies, And my heart leaps out to that little dell As my hope goes out to paradise. There's never a day but I long to go To that little home that I used to know Where the old corn null turns out its grist, And the night birds fly thru the river mist, And mossy banks are forever kissed lly the waves of the Congarce.

The cotton fields stretch far away Where the black folks live in happy throng, And the mocking bird sings all the day And the wood thrush chants his evening song. Each day there is a day of joy That thrills the heart of a barefoot boy, Where the old corn mill turns out its grist, And the night birds thy thru the river mist, And mossy banks are forever kissed By the waves of the Congaree.

There's an old churchyard by the greenwood side And a stone that stands as a sentinel By a simple grave that's deep and wide Where the forms of two fair spirits dwell. And a pair of eyes and a baby's face Cast a spell o'er that sacred place Where the old corn mill turns out its grist, And the night birds By thru the river mist, And mossy banks are forever kissed By the waves of the Congaree.

O take me back to the old home land And let me drink at the spring again, And build a wall on the sparkling sand That's washed so clean by the summer rain. I love to dream of the days I knew When I played so free by the waters blue Where the old corn mill turns out its grist, And the night birds fly thru the river mist, And mossy banks are forever klssed By the waves of the Congarce.

MAIL SERVICE UNCHANGED

The foilowing letter from the postal authorities in reference to the change of mail schedule was received by l'ostmaster L. C. Adams for the Information of the public: My dear sir:

I am in receipt of a numerouslysigned petition addressed to Post Office Department D. C., under date of November 26, 1922, bearing your Indorsement, in which request is made for the restoration of mail service in train 33.

Under the new time card train 33 departs from Cincinnati 7:00 a. m., while train 35 leaves this point at 8:35 a. m. With the earlier departure of train 33 that train would fail to receive seven of the most important connections at Clncinnati, rendering service therein of less value than in train 35. It was deemed advisable, therefore, to transfer the mail service from train 33 te train 35 in order to obtain the maximum results from a service standpoint. The only malls that train 33 would accumulating in the Cincinnati post-office from 8:00 p. m. to 7:00 a. m. The important mail trains arriving at Cincinnati in the morning and carrying mails originating at points in the North and East would not connect North and East would net connect train 33 and would necessarily be delayed one business day.

I believe that you can realize the importance of having mail service in train 35 rather than in train 33 and will explain the situation te patrons of your office.

Should the L. & N. R. R. Ce. change the leaving time of train 33 so as to permit all cennections bereceived from morning trains centercentering a tthis point, consideration will be given to transferring the mail service to train 33.

Very respectfully, R. N. BIRD, Superintendent

Section of the Contract of the Economic Pressure of Industrial Conflict Not

By JUDGE W. L. HUGGINS, Kansas Industrial Court.

Unlike War Blockade

The économic pressure of industrial conflict is not unlike the economic pressure of the blockade in international warfare. It is the duty of the government to protect the life, the liherty, the health and the peace of the people. It makes no difference by whom the public is means by which bodily heat and en- ing is worn indoors during the day threatened, whether by organized labor, by organized capital, by organized ergy is conserved. The influence of or if too warm covering is used at insurrection or by a foreign enemy.

"Razorbacks" Tied Up; Snakes Increase

Now that "snake bile" medicine is no longer procurable, the country is literally being overrun with polsonous reptiles, the biological survey and forestry service announce,

The reason for this, however, has not as much to do with the scarcity of far-famed antidotes as it has with the disappearance of the lale lamented razorback porker and the building up of fences separating various plots of plowed land and estates.

Time was, and not so long ago, the Department of Agriculture unnounces, when the life of a snuke. even the deadly rattler, was a short one. The hog reigned supreme in the forest. There were no fences and his range was a wide one. Illa favorite dish was the live rattler. And in his greed the territory over which he ranged was completely cleared of this most dangerous of American reptlies.

For a long time scientists marveled at the ability of the hog to conquer n polsonous snake la free for all, catch weights, open combat, Experiments were conducted and it was learned that the hog made no effort at all to avoid the snake or his hite. His heavy filde and the thick coating of fat just beneath has no circulation.

II. Who Is My Naighbor (vv. 29 :17).

1. The lacwyer's Question (v. 20). This question reveals the insincerity of the lawyer. Christ's answer had reached his conscience and now he seeks to escape the difficulty by asking a cuptions question. Lawyer-like he sought to get off by raising a question as to the menning of words,

2. Jesus' Answer (vv. 30217). Christ's reply more than answered the lawyer's question. In the parable of the Good Samariton He makes clear who is a neighbor, and idso what it means to be a neighbor or what loving a neighbor means. Christ's answer had a double menning. He not only made clear who is my neighbor, but made it clear that the lawyer was not playing the neighbor. He thus was con victed of not having been a neigh-

Washington.-Shortly there will gather in Washington representatives of the Central American states to coafer together with representatives of the United States in behalf of means for closer economic prion, for lasting pence and for the general good c the countries represented.

The Central American countries whose delegates are to come to Washingion are not great powers. In fact, they are among the minor conatries of the world, but there is a feeling in Washington that something of great good to the world any come out of the conference, which soon is to be held in this city.

It is just about a year ugo that the great conference called to discuss the limitation of armaments and Far East problems was held in tids city. Navy matters were discussed and to some extent settled at that gathering. but the hard armaments problems

In Central America there has been through the years a succession of warlike troubles, internal revolutions and wars between the different countries. the latter occurring occasionally upon very simil provocation.

It is known that at the coming conference the question of land disarman ent will be discussed, or ut any rate portful disarmanient. It seems to be agreed that if something along this line can be accomplished there will be less danger in the future of trouble between Central American countries.

May Set Example for Europe. The discussion of partial discrina meat will not, of course, and cannot lave any direct reference to like matters la Europe, but for some reasoa there is a very definite hope in Wash ngton that the example of this "little conference" may be followed by some greater conference, and that eventually the land armaments of the great powers materially may be decreased and the clances increased of prolonged peace.

lenders of both parties for a great many years. The first step toward a real union was taken when James G. Blaine was secretary of state, many years ago. True Pan-American union never has been reached, although progress toward a better understanding hetween the countries of the western hemisphere has been fairly steady.

If the United States were not so hig and so overshadowing in its strength, It is probable that a union of symputhy and of commerce and of general understanding would have been reached between the countries of the New World a great namy years ago. American statesmen linve licen met constantly in their emicavors to bring about an understanding by evidences of a feeling in the smaller countries to the south that the great republic was sellish in its desires and that under the guise of friendship it was reaching out for advantages.

"Monitor Nation" Plan Dropped. Some years ago when there were threatenings of trouble between two Latin-American republics the United Stutes conceived a plan by which severnl of the larger Latin-American reimplies should assurate the duties of 'monitor intions." It was thought that if Brazil, Argentian, Chill and one or two other countries should take over the persuasive and pucifying work of keeping order that the smaller countries would not resent the quiet but forceful interference as much as they would resent it if it came from the United States.

This plan was tried for a while and In one case when two Central American countries were having trouble it produced good results, but the plan today no longer is 'n operation, Mexico, which was studie at the time, was maied as one of the monitor antions. Then Mexico got into trouble on its own account, and so the world had the spectacle of one monitor nutlou very much in need of admoalshing on its owa account.

The Mouroe Doctrine stands in the way of the seizure of American territory by foreign powers. It generally la accepted as a hulwark of territorial defense for the Latin-American countries, but aevertheless there is some resentment in these conatries because of the Moaroe Doctrine. It is a nutter of pride with the Latin-Americans. They have gone so far as to say "We caa look after our own territory." The question is, can they?

ress, but since the stays that the Ts ruelites fought the Philistines, and even before that, wars have come even when peace was believed to be certain to rule in the future. Therefore the United States today is taking no chattee. Neither the army or the navy has nuch money to spend for drilling purposes of any kind, but such money as there is, is being used to what the service men helleve to be the best purpose. Quoting from an explanation of the maneuvers, the following is what they are intended to do:

"These experiments are expected to deternance the sultability of airships captive balloons and airplanes in observation of lire; ranges and conditions which make air observation prefemble to ground observations; the number of airphines width can be used simultaneously to observe and report deviations in the field of fire and extext of interference to rudio telephone and telegraphic messages caused by neighboring rollo communications in operation; the best method of observing and reporting deviations from airship and airplanes; the best method of observing and reporting deviations as observed from ground stations and ranges and conditions at which verticut spotting from captive balloons near the battery tiring is more satisfactory than sporting from ground stations."

All to Protect Our Coast.

Now all this seems to be rather se verely technical, but what is to be done largely concerns itself with making it us near certain as possible that in case the coast of this country ever shall be nttucked by a foreign flect, our airplanes may be able quickly not only to locate approaching warships, but lastantly to notify the land batteries of the exact range,

All over the world the science of avintion today is advancing rapidly. In England they have just been holding what was called gliding tests. Airplanes without any engines take to the air, and by clever manipulation some of the operators have managed to slay in the air after the manner of a bird for so long a time as two bours. It is, therefore, within the range of possibilities that one day men will be able to do that which he started out to do years ago-tly like a bird.

It is not believed in Washington that even with the perfection of gliding machines the motor-operated airpisae ever will be superseded, because the muchine with a motor in it can make three times an express train speed, but it is believed that flying, real flying. ope day will be possible. Of course, flying suggests "linpping of wings." What man really is accomplishing to dny to a minor degree is "soaring." The present day gibler stays up in the air somewhat after the manner of a buzzard or a hawk. It is true that hawks and buzzards flap their wings but they make considerable distances at times without any appreciable wiag a)ovement.

Flying by No Means Safe Yet.

Army aviators say that it is something of a reltef to be able to go an into the air without the virtual certulnty that somebody is going to take per shots at them from pati-nir guns, and without also the almost certain kipwledge than na enemy avlator is to come at them with his Fokker and his machine guo. There are dangers enough, however, today, as the serv ices know, in air payigution The denth lists of the services still are heavy, and yet neither the array aor the navy is having the slightest diffiulty in getting pien willing to the air training with the knowledge rest of her days. TWO ARE LAYING CLAIM TO $20,000,000 LAND

Chicago's Wealthiest Families Are Called Upon to Defend Their Property Rights.

The late Cap'n Streeter, ruler of the "Deestrict of Lake Michigan," may turn over in his grave when the docket of the Circuit court of Cook county is called next November. At that time new elaimants to land on Chicago'e Gold Const will present their contentions in court, Nearly 400 property owners, including representatives of some of the city's oldest and weslthlest families, have been summoned to defend their right to land valued at more than $20,000,000,

Among those served with notice to appear in the case are the heirs of William B. Ogdea, N. K. Fairbank, Potter Paliner, Cyrus II. McCormick, Arthur Dixen, Mnry V. McCormick, Will J. Davis and Mary C. Healy.

The new claimants to Gold Coast iand are Mrs. Elizabeth Schmidt and Herman Krueding. According to their contentions, Cap'n Streeler did not cast enchor on a bleak and desert coast when he discovered his alleged "deestrict."

Instead, he innded on Johnston's island, a sandbar off what is now Ohio street, and found there a wooden chanty in which l'eter Johnston lived, cared for his fishing nets, and dispensed cheering liquor to thirsty fishermen.

Johnston lived there for 30 years, it la alleged, but hefore he died geve a deed to his holding to the mother of Mrs. Sebmidt. This deed was later lost or stolen, but Mrs. Schmidt declares she will have witnesses to prove its existence.

Sand washed up by the waves of Lake Michigan added steadily to the area of Johnston's Island, while the Illinois and Michigan Canal and Dock company, finding renl estate more prof-Itable than a waterway, filled in the nearby cannt and the shore adjacent nntll the old sandbar was connected with the malaland. Then the canal company divided Johnston's laland, an island no more, into lots and sold that land also.

Funny Christmas Habit.

There is not a drug sture, cigar shop or barroom in the larger cities which has not been made the storage room for Christmus presents bought before the rush sets in. The stronge part of it is that every man who utilizes the friendship of his favorite place round the corner thinks he is the only one who thought of the plan. Realizing that the stores will be crowded, many far-sighted heads of families bought their presents a week in advance, and then, fearing the nature of the mysterious package would be discovered at the office or at home, they hit upon the device of making n cache in some resort near home.

An Independent Sovereignty Within Our Borders Amenable to No Law?

By KARL C. SCHUYLER, Address at Freeport, Ill.

We must now meet this question: Are our interstale railroads, their executives and their employees, privileged, at their own pleasure and by their own whim and caprice to inconvenience, dislocate, bully, domineer, disable and harass the 100,000,000 people of the United States who lave no direct interest in their controversies? Do they constitute nu independent sovereignly within our borders, amenable to no law, amenable to no persuasion except their own unbridled desires.

Let those who are eager for the present destruction of this unified nation answer in the affirmative.

I believe, unless Lincoln's murtyrdem and the sentiered monuments of Union and Confederate dead are to represent but an illusory and wasted sacrifice, that if we would preserve this country upon the prineiples which have heretofore been sacred to us, the time has come when we must by law, and if necessary by constitutional amendment, deny the right to strike or lock out in essential national industries, clarged with a public interest, declare that they shall be operated without interruption, and substitute for present methods a tribunal for industrial peace and justice, representative of all the people-which shall have jurisdiction of all necessary parties, which shall have power to investigate all facts and make binding decisions when such disputes cannot be settled peaceably without strike or lockout by the parties to them

The Secret of Successful Saving

If you were to ask us to tell you, in one word, the secret of successful saving for the average man or woman, we'd anwer: Regularity.

That is to say: The average man or woman who deposits a regular sum at regular intervals -if only a dollar a week-will create the habit of saving; and habit makes ease and certainty.

How long does it take? Just one short year, in most cases, if the deposit is made the same day every week, and the balance is left untouched.
